

‘From Carer to Coach’

Becoming a Behavioural Coach
with Dr. Lisa Fahey

In the care sector there is a demand for more qualified carers with higher levels of skills, compassion, resilience, and stamina. And yet there are a number of very real difficulties with this role – risk of assault or accusation of misconduct, poor supervision, high ethical demands, shift work, emotional and psychological challenges, and limited peer support.

Our research shows there is a more positive, enjoyable and rewarding way to be a carer.

The course presents a series of training events that are modular, accessible and evidence-based. You’ll have a chance to meet like-minded peers and learn from a leader in the field, Dr Lisa Fahey, whose academic, field and consulting work has been focused on improving carer resilience and professionalism for decades.

Every attendee also receives complimentary online access to all other sessions in the series. This library of video resources continues to expand after each session.
